

Angela “Angie” Carey, Senior Director, Community-Based Partnerships

As Senior Director, Community-Based Partnerships, Angie is responsible for establishing strategic goals for integrated relationships with community-based organizations (CBOs), representing CareSource as an ambassador for social determinants of health (SDOH) programs and identifying CBO entities in target markets. She leads teams of community relations experts dedicated to serving members across nine states nationwide.

With more than 30 years’ experience as a health care leader. Angie is known for her expertise in business development, community outreach and request for proposals (RFPs). Previously, she served as Community Engagement Manager – Medicaid Division at Aetna, where she was responsible for engaging community stakeholders to build support for integrated service delivery, implementing a governance structure to assist RFP teams in communicating the company’s vision and creating more than 100 community-based partnerships that included strategic investments. During her tenure, she also held the position of Business Development Manager and was an Executive Board Member of their African American employee resource group. In her role as Associate Director, Community Living, she managed daily operations of the Easterseals Midwest Independent Supported Living Program which helps adults with developmental disabilities live and work in the community and developed action plans to improve quality of services.

Originally from Missouri, Angie earned her bachelor’s degree in sociology with an emphasis on health equity and public relations from Southern Illinois University in Carbondale, Illinois.

Angie is based in Wesley Chapel, Florida, a suburb of Tampa.
